Job Opportunity for Web Page Development

The Physical Oceanography Division at the NOAA's Atlantic Oceanographic and Meteorological Laboratory is seeking one degree-seeking student in a local College or University to work part-time in web page development.

The selected candidate will maintain and improve the divisional web pages in collaboration with scientists from the Laboratory. The candidates are expected to have strong knowledge in web page development and design (e.g., php, html, css, java, etc) with general interest in science and very good English writing skills.

This part-time position will require a maximum of 15 hours of work per week and can be partly done remotely. The hourly pay will depend on qualifications. It ranges between $20 and $30. The candidate should be legally eligible to take this part-time job.
