Hi John,

I don't know for sure how the NOAA logo with "NOAA Satellite Information Systems" ended up on their web site. They didn't ask us at the GDP if they could use that. The fact that NESDIS is listed below the logo suggests to me that they harvested this from a Google search that led them to a NESDIS site.

The drifters are intended to be cheap and expendable, but are sometimes recovered. In those cases, they are either disposed of or returned to the manufacturer for examination and possible repair, depending on their condition. They do not contain lithium batteries or any other hazardous materials.

Please feel free to remove my comments in square brackets in that document
- they no longer apply to text in the document.

Best,
  Rick

On Wed, Oct 17, 2012 at 4:20 PM, John Ewald <john.ewald@noaa.gov> wrote:

> All,
>
> As a courtesy, I shared our Q&A document with Allison Reed in > International Affairs, who is a conduit to State Dept & EPA on this issue.
> She has some input attached.
>

> Not sure how the NOAA logo got onto their website and not sure how we can > remedy that -- Rick/Erica, any insight?
>
> (Allison - for your last question, I don't believe drifters are recovered > often. Sometimes when they wash up and we find them, I think they can be > discarded.)
>
> V/r,
> John
>
> ---------- Forwarded message ----------
> From: Allison Reed <allison.reed@noaa.gov>
> Date: Wed, Oct 17, 2012 at 4:04 PM
> Subject: Re: DRAFT Q&As re: sulfate dump off Canada
> To: John Ewald <john.ewald@noaa.gov>
>
>
> Thanks John, I have attached a few edits, and one additional question that > may be posed at the end of the Q/A. Unfortunately it looks as though > everything is saved now as the same color for tracked changes. I am not > sure how that happened, but hopefully you can see which edits I have > added. Main edits relate to changing text to reflect that we accepted > their offer to deploy vs we donated these to them. I believe the changes > reflect the situation a bit more accurately, however happy to defer to the > experts in the drifter program.
>
> The additional Q I pose at the end is related to NESDIS logo on HSRCs > website. I dont know the know the answer to that.
>
> Additionally, it may be useful to answer a Q on whether drifters are ever > recovered. Again I dont know the answer to that.
>
> Allison
>
>

--14dae93b58ae0c336504cc473e0e
Content-Type: text/html; charset=ISO-8859-1
Content-Transfer-Encoding: quoted-printable

Hi John,

I don't know for sure how the NOAA logo with "NOAA= Satellite Information Systems" ended up on their web site.=A0 They di= dn't ask us at the GDP if they could use that.=A0 The fact that NESDIS
=
is listed below the logo suggests to me that they harvested this from a Goo=
gle search that led them to a NESDIS site.

The drifters are intended to be cheap and expendable, but are sometimes= recovered.=A0 In those cases, they are either disposed of or returned to t= he manufacturer for examination and possible repair, depending on their con= dition.=A0 They do not contain lithium batteries or any other hazardous mat= erials.

Please feel free to remove my comments in square brackets in that docum= ent - they no longer apply to text in the document.

Best,
=A0
Ric=
k

On Wed, Oct 17, 2012 at 4:20 PM, Jo= hn Ewald <<a href=3D"mailto:john.ewald@noaa.gov"
targe= t=3D"_blank">john.ewald@noaa.gov> wrote:
<blockquote class=3D"gmail_quote" style=3D"margin:0 0 0
.8ex;border-left:1p=
x #ccc solid;padding-left:1ex">All,
As a courtesy, I shared our Q&a= mp;A document with Allison Reed in International Affairs, who is a conduit
=
to State Dept & EPA on this issue. =A0She has some input attached.</div=
>

Not sure how the NOAA logo got onto their website and n= ot sure how we can remedy that -- Rick/Erica, any insight?

(Allison - for your last question, I don't believe
=
drifters are recovered often. Sometimes when they wash up and we find them,= I think they can be discarded.)
V/r,
John

---------- Forwarded message

F= rom: Allison Reed <<=
a href=3D"mailto:allison.reed@noaa.gov"
target=3D"_blank">allison.reed@noaa=
.gov>

Date: Wed, Oct 17, 2012 at 4:04 PM
Subject: Re: DRAFT Q&As re: sulfa=
te dump off Canada
To: John Ewald <<a href=3D"mailto:john.ewald@noaa.=
gov" target=3D"_blank">john.ewald@noaa.gov>

Thanks
John, =
I have attached a few edits, and one additional question that may be posed
=
at the end of the Q/A.=A0 Unfortunately it looks as though everything is sa= ved now as the same color for tracked changes.=A0 I am not sure how that ha= ppened, but hopefully you can see which edits I have added.=A0 Main edits r= elate to changing text to reflect that we accepted their offer to deploy vs=

 we donated these to them.=A0 I believe the changes reflect the situation
a=
 bit more accurately, however happy to defer to the experts in the drifter
=
program.

The additional Q I pose at the end is related to NESDIS logo on HSRCs
w= ebsite.=A0 I dont know the know the answer to that.

Additionally,
it=
 may be useful to answer a Q on whether drifters are ever recovered.=A0 Aga=
in I dont know the answer to that.

Allison

</blockquote>

--14dae93b58ae0c336504cc473e0e--